

From: Albert Pisani
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 12/5/01 10:42pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

The deal with Microsoft giving the option of giving out its "blue prints" and having two versions of Windows(with and without applications) is ridiculous. The only reason that the people want the "blue prints" is so that they can make a product based off windows(a cheap rip off I like to call it). Think if you had to release the "blue Prints" of Windows. The source code will get in the hands of a Anti-Microsoft "terrorist", and they will develop ways of hacking the code, to make it easier to run illegal software on the system. You don't see these people asking all the gaming companies to release thier game's source code. Why? because, if they did, there will be so much more copying of games then there is already. Microsoft may be a little over priced, but I will surely pay for it. I don't NEED windows, I just like how it operates